Students at Moravian College and Lehigh University will have a unique opportunity to explore life’s purpose and meaning when the Rev. Malcolm Boyd arrives in Bethlehem on Sunday evening, February 5, to begin a lecture series with area college people. His theme, "Don’t Just Exist—Live!" is calculated to interest doubting and even cynical minds as well as convinced Christians.

Boyd will speak at each of the area colleges during the week.

Boyd is now the Chaplain of St. Paul’s House, the Episcopal Center at Colorado State University. He will talk with students on each campus during the week and will hold discussions to be held at 8 p.m. in the Parish House of the Cathedral Church of the Nativity on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights during his stay.

A dynamic speaker and original thinker, Rev. Boyd has rare preparation for his unusual ministry. Graduated from the University of Arizona, he commenced his work in the field of communications.

In 1951, he entered Moravian Church Divinity School of the Pacific, the seminary of the Episcopal Church in California. Graduating in 1954 with his Bachelor of Divinity degree, Boyd attended Oxford University in England for a year. Boyd recently served as co-chairman in charge of communications at a conference of the World Student Christian Federation in Strasbourg, France.

Congressmen Speak to College Group On Politics

Judd on China

Discussing with the group United States policy toward Communist China, Rep. Walter Judd of Minnesota explained that such policy must be guided by two prime objectives: first, prevention of the development of elements hostile to our own ends, and second, building the forces favorable to us.

To implement the former, Judd advocated continued non-recognition of the Chinese regime, and its exclusion from the United Nations, so long as possible. "We must remember their objective—world domination," he said. "Communism transcends national barriers and it operates in terms of international conspiracy."

Regarding the latter objective, Judd urged strengthening the smaller and/or uncommitted nations which fall easy prey to the Communist movement, such as Vietnam, Laos, Burma, and India.

However, Judd concluded, the struggle against World Communism is more than a political one, it is a "philosophical struggle over the nature of man," whether he is to be enslaved or free. "Communists are logical and militant athletes," he said, "and we must act to which we are supposed to follow."

Three Approaches to Government

Conferring separately with opponents of conservative, liberal and middle-of-the-road policy, the group discussed certain vital issues with Michael Bernstein, member of the Senate Education Committee, Bernard Nash, secretary to Senator Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania, and Senator Hugh Scott, also of Pennsylvania.

Bernstein, representing conservative Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, expounded the view that by restoring the federal government’s power to a local status, "the citizen’s rights and ability to make decisions are also restored." Sensing danger in a strong federal government, he urged the decentralization of federal control, which would bring about the desegregation of "pressure groups" such as the AFL-CIO and the National Education Association.

These pressure groups, Bernstein said, tend to deprive the citizen of his individuality by acting as his voice in public issues.

Taking education as an example, Bernstein noted that under federal influence, tax money allocated for educational purposes must be spent only for education, whereas on the local level, the citizen has the option of spending his money for education or for some other purpose, as he sees fit.

Proposed legislation by Goldwater, Bernstein said, would permit the taxpayer to deduct the amount of school tax which he pays to the federal government and thus release those funds for use at the local level.

Agnostic, Atheist, Be Square?

Dear Students:

I don’t know what your approach to religion may be. You may, of course, be one of the ‘in’ group which is actively practicing religion — and, as such, you may have a deep faith and know what you are doing, or you may not.

It is possible you have discarded your parents’ religion along with your parents and that anything which didn’t remind you of them — which, in fact, might actively arouse your discomfort or fear — might be tittling to you.

You may be an agnostic. This is a quite wonderful thing, if you know what it means. Unfortunately, you may be a dishonest agnostic. Or you may simply be dishonest.

You may be an atheist — but this is so general, and an aspect of self-dramatization, that it is doubtful we could really find out in the context of the campus scene.

You may be best or you may be very, very grey. You may be happy (did you just fall in love sweet?) or you may be desperately unhappy (did you just fall out of love, or, indeed, do you know what love is?)

I dropped the Church the second week I was in college. I returned to it, some ten years afterward, on my knees. No one could have dreamed that I should become a college chaplain — or, for that matter, anything like a chaplain at all.

But I have become just that. And in a few days I’ll be among you, petitioning to know some of you individually and personally in counselling sessions, speaking to some classes, and, most importantly, giving four-hour talks on four nights in Bethlehem.

I’ve chosen what, to me, is an interesting and provocative theme. I hope you may find it so. I hope I get to meet you. I hope you don’t scrath me off, before we even have a chance of meeting, as a mere square or someone you don’t care to see at all. How can (Cont. on p. 3, col. 1)

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

BERRY PATCH

Student Tutoring by Alan Lipsman

Students encountering academic difficulty have on occasion found refuge in tutoring programs, whether formal or informal, and have often extricated themselves from such difficulties by seeking out and employing the assistance of teachers, professional tutors or even their fellow students.

One of the more successful formally organized student tutor societies is Sigma Tau Sigma, established at the University of Pennsylvania in 1954. The purpose of that organization has been to offer tutoring assistance free of charge to scholastically troubled students.

The advantages to such a program are manyfold. First, students who desire tutoring in any field have a central agency through which they can secure instruction from fellow students especially versed in the areas in which they desire help.

Second, this stimulates the embarrassment which students often experience by being compelled to ask their friends or teachers for extra help.

This program is superior to informal tutoring, which has been described as a ‘hit-or-miss’ affair. Students seeking aid in a particular subject are often unable to find individuals capable of tutoring them properly. Usually the ‘hit-or-miss’ tutors are just classmates who are taking the same course and consequently cannot approach the subject with a broad foundation of knowledge.

Students selected to act as tutors are drawn from the many qualified high - ranking scholars who express interest in acting as tutors for those students who desire help.

The number of hours a student tutor devotes to his activity is determined by himself; usually two to three hours per week, working with one or two ‘tutees’ having adequate time for participation in other extra-curricular activities.

Such a program is easily adapted to a small college such as Moravian. It cannot be denied that there are students who would profit greatly from tutoring and there (Cont. on p. 4, col. 2)
Wrestlers Face Two Opponents; Invade E-town And Haverford

The Moravian College grapplers will face the blue Jays of Elizabethtown for their third match of the season. These matches will be followed by a match on Wednesday, Feb. 8, with the Pards of Haverford. Both matches will be at their opponent’s home arena.

Although the two teams have not been scoffed yet, Coach Paul Kuklentz says the two meetings will be very rough matches, for both teams will be trying to stop the Greyhounds from a possible undefeated season.

Hounds slated to wrestle in both meets are Jack Gavin (133 lb. class), Bill Reinhart (157 lb. class), and Roger Grubbs in the 147 lb. class.

In the heavier weights Dick Bedics (157 lb. class), Dan Turner (167 lb. class), and either Dave Linsberry or Doug Wilkins in the heavyweight class will go for Kuklentz’s grapplers.

Student Tutoring

are indeed students who would express interest in acting as tutors themselves.

For the tutor, this is a worthwhile way to combine academic activity and provides students interested in the possibilities of a teaching career with the opportunity to investigate the many aspects of the art of teaching.

It seems that such a program has merit, especially when it is so adaptable and requires little time and effort on the part of the institution.

The University of Pennsylvania reports that the program has had much success.
