Course Overview: This course is designed to introduce students to the dynamic field of social theory. To this end, we will trace the historical development of social theoretic thought and identify some of the current issues and debates that shape the field. Through this course, students will
- Have developed a familiarity with theoretical logic and argumentation in sociology
- Have read and be familiar with key social thinkers from both the classical and contemporary periods.
- Understand and be able to analyze key issues in the field.
- Cultivate their sociological imaginations as they learn to apply the theories.
- Develop their own theoretical contributions.

A common set of issues will guide our inquiry into the work of pivotal social theorists and schools of social thought. What is the relationship between social action and social structure? How is social power produced, exercised, and challenged? How are social identities forged, articulated, and recognized in the modern world?

Course Requirements and Expectations: In addition to written work, for students to do well in this course, they will need to read and think systematically about social theory over the course of the semester. It is expected that all students will have thoroughly and thoughtfully completed the weekly readings, and be prepared to discuss these, by our first meeting of each week. Since many of arguments presented are complex and multi-faceted, it is expected that students read and re-read the assigned texts closely and conscientiously. Students are expected to regularly contribute to in-class discussions with reactions and responses that deal directly with the issues and texts being considered. This participation will count for 15 % of the final grade. Students will also have the opportunity to share their insights in writing through weekly reading logs (these will be discussed the first week of class). Reading logs will be collected only on the first course meeting of each week, graded on a scale of 0 – 4, with the ten highest scoring counting for 15 % of the final grade.

Other requirements:
- Midterm Exam — 20 % of final grade
- Final Exam — 20 % of final grade
- Reading Reaction Essay — 15 % of final grade
- Applied Theory Essay — 15 % of final grade
Repressive Policies and other mechanisms of social control:
Your attendance at all class sessions is expected. Tardiness and absences will negatively impact the participation portion of your grade. It is each student’s responsibility to arrive for each course meeting on time.
Please read, and familiarize yourself, with the policy on Academic Honesty in your student handbook. Cheating and Plagiarism will result in failing this course.
Students who wish to submit their writing assignments through electronic mail may send it to my email address only as an attached Word document. Assignments submitted in this way must be received by 10:00pm the evening before the due date. No late reading logs will be accepted, other late assignments will be penalized 10 % per day.

Required Texts:  The following texts are available in the bookstore.

Farganis, James. (2004). Readings in Social Theory, 4E. McGraw Hill. (Referred to in schedule as Far)

Supporting Texts:  The following are on reserve in the library. These resources will prove useful by providing different analyses and perspectives on the theorists we cover. All students are highly encouraged to consult these resources regularly.
