Course Description:
Exit polls following the 2004 presidential election indicated that religious beliefs and issues greatly influenced its outcome. Matters such as abortion, gay marriage, the death penalty, euthanasia, and war set off conversations, often heated, about where God stands on these issues. People of faith continue to read the same Bible yet often draw opposite conclusions concerning what these sacred texts say about social and political issues. This course will provide opportunities to read, discuss, and write about how politics and religious rhetoric are interwoven in today's American society.

By the end of this course you should have obtained the following:

- A sampling of the Bible's influence in American Politics
- An understanding of the various ways religious traditions, particularly Christians (because 85-90% of US Citizens identify themselves as such) use the Bible to make their decisions on social and moral issues
- A comprehensive review of Writing and language skills
- An ability to communicate using several voices through written and oral means

Required Texts:
Course Requirements:
Each assignment except the portfolio and the group presentation will go through the following process (drafts before the final work that will be work-shopped with a partner in the group and in consultation with me. Below is the workshop process:

Writing Workshop Process
You will be a member of a group with two other students who will serve as your peer mentors and reviewers throughout the semester. Every Friday following a paper’s draft deadline will be used to workshop this written material. Therefore every student must have his/her draft ready to exchange with a member of his/her group by class time on its due date. Each reader will prepare comments and HELPFUL critiques to be shared individually with the writer during the workshop. Group readers will rotate within the group with every assignment. Remember, writing is a process. Please be respectful and helpful. Sharing work is a very vulnerable thing to do. Please inform me immediately of any concerns that arise from this process. Collegiality will also be reflected in the overall course grade. Drafts will not receive a letter grade (but your hard work will be reflected in your final writing assignment grade).

10% Class Participation
This grade will also be based on the following:

- Individual meetings with Deborah (15-30 minutes) at least every 4 weeks
- Class attendance and participation (with all assignments on time): no more than 3 excused absences; 5 total. Each absence after 3 will be reflected in your final grade (1/3 a letter grade for each day)
- Active involvement in class writing workshops (see below for details)
- Weekly posting to the blackboard threaded discussion During the semester class members will post to blackboard’s threaded discussion area a 2-3 paragraph reaction to a reading or share an example that you came across that week (via newspaper, music, movies, tv) in which religion and politics intersect. In addition, each student should respond to the postings of two of your peers EVERY WEEK. While this assignment is required and will significantly impact your participation grade, it will not be graded. Each student will serve one week this semester as a web proctor to make sure that the discussions are respectful. One’s participation grade will be penalized if the discussion attacks another’s personal beliefs.
- Evaluations from your peers in your small group
- Your willingness to provide helpful (oral and written) input to your peers as you evaluate their work in class

25% Portfolio: This portfolio should contain all pre-writing practices, drafts, assigned Bedford selected handbook exercises (these should be completed on line or handwritten), and other writing assignments that occur over the course of the semester. Of the essays that you complete throughout the semester, choose two.
for further revision to include in the portfolio. The final portfolio is due No later than April 28th by 6:00 PM in my office.

5% Writing Center: Each student must provide evidence that she/he has worked with the writing tutor and that the feedback was integrated into the written project NO LATER THAN FEBRUARY 9. Those who visit the writing center more than once during the semester will receive the following (forgiveness on a missed class, forgiveness on a late paper).

10% Personal Voice Paper: This 2-3 page paper (double spaced) should respond to the following:
- What role do you think that religion should play in American politics? Back up your response with some concrete examples that have helped to form your opinion.
  Draft Due Feb 5th ; Workshop Feb 7th
  final due Feb 9th

10% Critique Paper (4-5 pages)
Choose a chapter from any of the three assigned class texts (West, Wallis, others) and offer a critique of its argument (or thesis) keeping in mind the following:
- What are the major arguments addressed in the article?
- On what evidence or logic does this argument rely?
- How is or isn’t the argument convincing? Feel free to offer a counter argument.

Make certain to consult the Bedford Handbook, Part IX on Critical Thinking
  Draft due Feb 16th , Workshop Feb 21st , Final due Feb 23rd

10% Lecture or Political Speech article – 3-4 pages (double spaced) (Audience: popular. Aim for Rolling Stone, Newsweek, and so forth). You can go two ways with this assignment:
- Write a political speech that integrates religion and politics (make sure to clarify the audience and the office) Feel free to write one for a real candidate and a real situation- play speech writer. Also, feel free to use creative writing to get this information across.
- Report on a political speech (state of the union message, senate confirmation, possible related lecture at Moravian or Lehigh) and write an article highlighting how religion is evoked by the speaker to forward a political objective. Allow the insights of your course reading to strengthen your article.
  Draft Due Mar 16th , workshop March 21st , Final due March 23rd

10% Group Presentation (Audience: this class; 20-25 minutes)
Prepare a presentation based on a section of the syllabus material that interests you and has not been covered. Use some form of multimedia (Power Point; Music; Poetry, Film, Video—feel free to create your own; integration of media is key here!)

Presentations will take place the week of April 11 and 13.

20% Research Paper (Academic Voice: 10-12 pages) Choose one of the following to research:

- a politician or religious leader who has employed biblical rhetoric to further a political and religious agenda in the United States. This person can be current or historical as long as he or she has impacted American culture. Your paper should include a discussion of the religious issues that drive this person’s public policy. (Get to know the person, his/her religious beliefs, his/her speeches, writings, sermons, or other media of influence. How does this person interpret biblical texts and biblical authority to make his or her political case?). Some possible candidates for exploration are: George W Bush, Ken Rove, Bill Frist, Jerry Falwell, Rick Warren, Hillary Clinton, Jesse Jackson, Pope Benedict, Cornel West—you get the idea. Feel free to go local or global.

- a political issue that has religious implications (or vice versa). Research how politicians and religious personnel have used biblical texts to make their points and to impact American culture. Some possible issues: euthanasia, Shiavo case, the ten commandments in court rooms, death penalty, gay marriage, abortion, war, slavery, manifest destiny, founding of the US, racism, suffrage movements, etc.

Draft due April 20th; Workshop April 25th; Final paper due April 27th on blackboard

My Expectations for all research papers—-I want:

- A clear thesis statement that lays out the primary issue including the position that will be argued throughout the paper.
- Support for this position through a good integration of primary and secondary source material (articles, books). Use 8-10 sources legitimate sources (discussed in class) and only 2 from internet sites (articles taken from Library online sources do not count as internet sources)
- A well written paper with careful attention to grammar, sentence structure, flow of argument, use of footnotes and bibliographical notation.
- DO NOT USE WIKIPEDIA ONLINE- USE LEGITIMATE SOURCES!!! WITH AUTHORS AND REPUTABILITY

Make certain to consult the Bedford Handbook, Part X on Research Writing

Evaluation:
Bedford exercises, all drafts, pre-writing exercises (research notes, ideas), blackboard threaded discussions (where information can be shared with each other) should be placed in the portfolio. All of these will receive credit but not a letter grade. The same is true for the following: Students who regularly attend class, who actively provide constructive feedback to their peers, who participate in class discussions, attend scheduled meetings with the professor, and who meet with the writing tutor at least once will meet the minimum credit for this course. Each student will provide in their portfolio a peer evaluation (not graded) for each member of his or her peer group including him or herself.

A student’s final grade will be determined by the level of commitment he or she has to the writing process. A grade of B will be awarded to every student who meets all deadlines, fully participates in the workshops, attends class, and completes all of the other assignments listed above. This means that those who find writing difficult will be rewarded for working hard to improve their skills even if their writing continues to need improvement. In addition, many past writing students have asked to be graded on individual assignments in order to see how their work would be graded in regular classes. Therefore I will give letter grades on final papers and not drafts. Those who are concerned about the A range will have a better feel for where their grade stands overall on PAPERS ALONE. Attendance, deadlines, workshops, and so forth are factored into the final grade. If you have questions about your performance, do not hesitate to ask me!! I will grade each FINAL PAPER based on the following:

Cheating, plagiarism, disruptive classroom behavior and all that other ugly stuff: I encourage you to study in groups with other students, as well as to do additional research on your own. There is a wealth of material available about religion. You may use any books, websites, and other resources to facilitate your learning. However, all work you turn in must be your own. When citing someone else’s idea, please use proper documentation (see Bedford Handbook). Please consult the student handbook for more information concerning what constitutes plagiarism. There are severe consequences for such activities.

As religious beliefs are often at the core of one’s values and outlook on life, some of the topics dealt with in class may be sensitive issues to you or your classmates and may evoke strong opinions. We will most likely encounter a wide range of differences of viewpoints. Questioning and disagreeing is fine, but hostile behavior and intolerance is not. It is essential, therefore, for us to respect the opinions and viewpoints of one another. Anyone who is disrespectful and disrupts the learning process will not be tolerated and may incur disciplinary action and/or removal from class.

Need Assistance?

- If you have questions or problems in terms of doing research or writing a research paper, consult with me.
- If you have learning disabilities, you need to let the professor know about your situation and to follow the following procedures:

Special Learning Needs

It is the responsibility of students with disabilities to identify themselves and request accommodations through the appropriate office.

For health, physical, mobility, hearing, visual, mental health/psychiatric, or drug and alcohol disabilities, contact the director of counseling, 1307 Main Street; 610 861-1510.

For disabilities that affect cognition (learning disabilities and attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder or ADHD), contact the director of learning services, 1307 Main Street; 610 861-1510.

The student must provide documentation of a disability and a rationale for the requested accommodations from a professional with expertise in the condition. The documentation must include a specific diagnosis and a thorough report. Required documentation for learning disabilities and attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder must include the results of a comprehensive psychoeducational assessment (including all subtest scores) that evaluates the intellectual functioning, achievement, and information-processing domains of cognitive functioning. The diagnosis must be based on DSM-IV diagnostic criteria. In addition, documentation for ADHD should include evidence of both early and current impairment, a diagnostic interview with third-party input (teachers or parents), and an interpretive summary that explains how the disability is a substantial limitation to learning. Testing should be recent (administered within the past three years prior to enrollment) for learning disabilities and ADHD.

It is the responsibility of the student to request accommodations well in advance of need in order to give the College a reasonable amount of time to evaluate the documentation and implement the accommodation.
