COURSE OBJECTIVE: Our goal in this course is to acquire a comprehensive sense of the range of writing produced in Britain between 1780 and 1830. We will start by reading and discussing texts that reveal the major historical conditions and social and cultural movements to which writers responded. We will then focus on a broad range of British men and women writers, each of whose work reveals the development of both the public and the private voice.

COURSE METHOD: This course will consist primarily of discussion, some lecturing, student presentations, two essays, and two exams.

EVALUATION: Midterm (20%), final exam (20%), two essays (15%, 20%), class presentation (5%), journal (15%), class attendance & participation (5%).

ATTENDANCE: I expect you to attend class regularly and promptly, to have read the assignment carefully, and to be ready for discussion. I will read off your name at the beginning of each class, both to learn who you are and to keep track of your attendance. It is your responsibility to consult with me if you are late or absent.

CLASS PARTICIPATION AND JOURNAL: Discussion--the articulation and sharing of our ideas--will be an important component of this course. Ideally, our ideas will flow freely from our thorough and thoughtful consideration of the texts we are reading. But to ensure that everyone is ready to contribute to the discussion, you are required to maintain a journal. For each class session, after reading all the assigned works, make an entry in your journal, at least 150 words, in which you discuss one of the works from each section of the day's assignment, with regard to its context. In other words, try to relate the text to other contemporary documents we have read or to other works of literature. Your personal response to the text is also valuable, but your entry should consist primarily of this kind of contextualization, since one of our goals in this course is to recognize and understand the interrelationship between literature and other facets of society.

 Your participation grade will reflect your regular, voluntary engagement in class discussion.

At the right hand corner of the assignment sheet, record your name, the date the assignment is due, the author’s name, the title of the work you write about, and a word count.

 Your journal entries will be due at the start of each class, and if you have fulfilled the above requirements you will receive full credit for the entry.  Since the journal is designed to enhance class discussion, entries submitted apart from class (due to an absence, even if the entry is submitted in advance) or at the end of class (unless typed) will receive no more than half credit.

You should expect to work 6+ hours per week outside of class, in addition to preparation for essays and exams.

STUDENT PRESENTATIONS: In order to enhance class discussion, each student will be responsible for providing a brief commentary (5-8 minutes) on one of the assigned texts. This commentary should reflect our joint attempt to approach the readings in the light of their historical, social, and cultural context. Since we will all have read the introduction to the assigned author, please do not include any biographical information unless it is absolutely essential to your discussion about how the author's writing stands in relation to the period in which it is written.

The presentation should conclude with a question or questions that open the floor for group discussion.

 Please turn off and put away all cell phones during class.

 Final exams run from April 30-May 4; adjust your travel plans to accommodate that schedule.
WRITING ASSIGNMENTS: The first essay will be on an assigned topic, to be announced. The second essay will be on an author of your own choice, and will require extra reading and secondary research. We will discuss this essay in more detail as the course progresses. Both essays should follow the guidelines outlined in the attached “Rubric.”

Note: Due dates for essays are firm. If for some extraordinary reason you must be late, you need to talk to me. Late papers automatically receive a lower grade.

Note: It is within the instructor’s purview to apply qualitative judgment in determining grades for any assignments and for the course final grade.

ACADEMIC HONESTY: Cheating and plagiarism will not be tolerated. Plagiarism is the misrepresentation of someone else’s work as your own. This includes such instances as quoting directly from a published work without giving the author credit (i.e. proper citation), inserting the author’s words as your own, using or "borrowing” another student's work, buying a paper from a professional service, etc. It is your responsibility to be familiar with what constitutes plagiarism and, in the event of uncertainty, to ask in a constructive manner about a writing in question before it is due in a final version. You are also required to keep all note cards and rough drafts on papers and assignments until given a final grade for that course. Evidence of plagiarism and cheating will be dealt with in accordance with the college policy on academic honesty found in the Student Handbook. Please read this policy in its entirety. In the event of a suspected infraction – in fairness to your peers and the standards of the college – it is my job to send the materials in question to the Dean’s Office at which time you are given the chance to provide your perspective on the matter.

SCHEDULE OF ASSIGNMENTS:

Readings should be completed by the day on which they are listed. This schedule may be revised as the course progresses. I will announce changes in class.
