Purpose of Course

The purpose of this course, in a broad sense, is to provide you with answers to the questions: What is sociology and what does it have to do with me? In order to answer these questions as fully as possible in a one-semester course, we will look at various theories, concepts, and methods sociologists use. By doing this, you will develop a sociological perspective of human behavior that will make you see sociology all around you. This way of looking at the world is called the sociological imagination, which I’m not sorry to say, most former students tell me they can’t shake, even 10 years later.

Get ready for a sociological adventure around your world!

Classroom Climate

Sociology involves many controversial topics and we’ll be doing lots of talking this semester about some of those topics. In our conversations, I’d like to use the following statement as our guide in the classroom:

Respect is the cornerstone of all our interactions and behaviors. We acknowledge the dignity and worth of one another and strive never to diminish another by our conduct or our attitudes.

From www.tolerance.org; created at Mariner High School in Everett WA

Helpful Hint

Here’s a poem I thought you might find useful for this class, especially if you label yourself as a procrastinator. It appeared in:

Tomorrow

Tomorrow’s never there.
It always runs away.
Every time I catch it
It says it’s called Today.
Student Learning Outcomes

You will be able to:

1. Define and explain the basic concepts, theories, and research methods of sociology.
2. Acquire knowledge about some of the primary subfields within the discipline, including specific knowledge about class, race and ethnicity, gender, and age.
3. Increase cultural sensitivity and knowledge regarding diversity in the US and around the world.
4. Apply concepts and theories to a particular case, including your own experience, using your skills of analysis, synthesis, and evaluation. In the process, you will be engaging in abstract reasoning.
5. Logically organize ideas according to social science criteria in written assignments.

Grading Based on Outcomes

A Excellent mastery of basic knowledge (1-3) and analysis and writing (4-5)
    Exams, In-Class Work, and Out-of-Class Work are completed on time and according to directions, showing you can both remember and use the knowledge gained through reading and class work. Your writing shows organizational skill, the ability to use abstract reasoning, and the use of knowledge gained in the classroom and readings.
B Good mastery of all outcomes
C Moderate mastery of basic knowledge and minimal mastery of analysis and writing
D Minimal mastery of all outcomes
F Little, if any, mastery of outcomes

A 93-100 / A- 90-92
B+ 87-89 / B 83-86 / B- 80-82
C+ 77-79 / C 73-76 / C- 70-72
D+ 67-69 / D 60-66
F Below 60

Book

Other readings will be photocopied and handed out during class.
Policies

Attendance
While I do not grade your attendance directly, I do take attendance and it is clearly counted indirectly in your grades. I can’t stress this enough. I’ll be straight up. Students who miss class do not do as well as those who attend on a regular basis. I try to make class as interesting as possible so attending isn’t painful. When you miss class, you get out of sync. Missing class means missing notes and discussions that become part of your exams. You also might miss discussions about topics or further explanations about work due. Also, in-class work can’t be made up.

Due Dates
The due dates for various assignments and tests are in the schedule. I should tell you now that make-up exams are tough and I wouldn’t recommend them. You need to hand in any homework or papers at the beginning of class or they will be considered late. Late work will be reduced one letter grade per day, not per class. It’s not fair to the other students who hand in their work on time if I accept late work without a penalty.

Academic Honesty
I will not tolerate cheating or plagiarism. You will receive an automatic F for the course.

Withdrawal
The last day to withdraw from the class with a W is in the Academic Calendar. After that time, you will receive a grade.

Methods of Assessment

Exams = 30%
Your exams will consist of essay questions. You will need to recall facts, discuss and explain concepts, apply your knowledge using illustrations and examples, and analyze information by comparing and contrasting various concepts.
Test#1 = 10%
Test#2 = 10%
Final = 10%

In-Class Work = 20%
As a group and individually, you will do various assignments during class such as reaction papers, example specifications, debates, discussions, and maybe even a mock trial.
Out-of-Class Work = 50%

You will be given homework assignments pertaining to topics covered in class, such as personalization and short reactions to classroom themes, TV viewing, experiments, and treasure hunts.

Homework = 20%

You will be given 3 projects called The I See Projects that apply knowledge gained in the class to the world around you. See directions under next heading.

I See Stratification = 10%
I See Gender Stratification = 10%
I See Sociology = 10%

Directions for "I See" Projects

These projects show you, as promised, that sociology is all around you. There are no page limits, but you must fully address all the parts asked for. Feel free to, in fact I encourage you to, hand in a draft of the first two projects early. I'll give you suggestions for improvement or maybe even an A and then you can move on to something else. Most people who do this end up with an A on the papers. How's that for an incentive to stop procrastinating, given the projects’ worth to your overall grade?

I See Stratification

Read over Peggy McIntosh's article. Think about what you have in your knapsack as you read her list. As you live your daily life (going to school, working, driving, shopping, walking down the street, etc.) think about these privileges.

Pick 5 of McIntosh's privileges and discuss how you saw them in your daily life. Be specific. Number each one 1 to 5, but also give McIntosh's numbers in your write-up.

Then write out who you are in terms of age, race/ethnicity, class, sexuality, and sex in one sentence. Pick one of the categories in which you are in the majority (talk to me if you are not in the majority in any category) and write out a list of 5 McIntosh-style privileges you have in your knapsack because of being in that majority group. Of course, they must be new; you can't use any of McIntosh's.
I See Gender Stratification

In this paper, you will analyze and contrast 2 television shows in terms of gender roles. Pick two shows which have a male and a female character in a marriage relationship. Use shows you’ve seen in the past as well as a current episode for this project, so you can give an overall picture as well as details of the particular episode.

Your first two paragraphs should include the name of the show, the date and time you watched the episode, and a brief summary of the plot.

Next, tell me the tasks and temperaments of the male and female in each show via 2 charts. You should use the table function in Word to keep the chart lined up. The list of tasks will probably be much longer than the list of temperaments, since TV concentrates on actions. Include both general tasks you’ve seen on past episodes and all of those you saw in the particular episodes you watched for the paper. I suggest you make the charts ahead of time and fill it in as you watch the episodes, listing all the tasks you see the characters perform, even little things like putting an empty coffee cup in the sink or putting it on the table.

Then, in paragraph form, make comparisons between the characters’ roles in the 2 shows. Write one paragraph comparing the males and one comparing the females. Then, write a conclusion in which you include which show portrays more gender stratification.

Hint: Pick shows that are as different as possible to make this paper easier, maybe a current show and a re-run of an older show.

I See Sociology

This one isn’t a paper; it’s a mini-presentation of about 5 minutes. You will find and share with the class written material about a topic covered this semester. It can be a song lyric, a comic strip, a newspaper or magazine article, a children’s book, a billboard, etc. If you’re not sure about what you found, run it by me. You will bring it (or a picture of it in the case of a billboard) to class and: 1) tell us when and where you saw it; 2) summarize or describe what it says; and 3) describe what it has to do with sociology using terms and concepts from the course.
