COURSE DESCRIPTION
The design of magazines, books and brochures involves collaborations between writers, designers, and editors. Through the design of several types of publications, students learn how to analyze and organize interrelated levels of written and visual narratives. Design, research, planning, editing, and computer skills are developed and combined with the investigation of a clear and appropriate design vocabulary. Projects will be done in a Macintosh platform utilizing the software programs Indesign and Photoshop. Prerequisite: AR 131.

COURSE GOALS:
The aim of this class is to enhance the design student’s development of the technique’s and skills for conceptual thinking and understanding of how edit and design come together to form the visual dialogs of publications.
1 Think, then design. Understanding of concept produces successful design.
2 Critical social thinking in context with liberal arts studies serves as a well for thoughtful design solutions.
2 Working design from sketching out ideas, through the design process and building comprehensive’s.
3 Understand typographic design structure; how a grid works; an organizational system of content.
4 Familiarization and with a number of prominent publication designers both contemporary and historical.
6 Understanding the responsibilities of an Art Director and the staff of a publication.
