Course Description

In 1917 Horacio Quiroga published a collection of short stories entitled Cuentos de amor, de locura y de muerte. Quiroga is well known as one of the masters of short stories not only for his tales of man and women working against the forces of nature, but also for his portrayal of unusual psychologies and mental states. Beyond his work as a storyteller, Quiroga was interested in the short story as genre. He composed various treatises on the topic including his famous “Decálogo del perfecto cuentista,” in which not without irony Quiroga spells out the basic rules for what he calls a “perfect short-story writer.”

Taking as a point of departure Quiroga's legacy, this course focuses on the most prominent writers and theorists of the Latin American short story from the beginning of the twentieth century to the present. We will study the classic stories that shaped the Latin American tradition as well as more recent contributions; such works offer a unique window into the cultural history of Latin America. As it will become apparent, some of the voices that we will encounter had shifted their geographical boundaries from Montevideo and Buenos Aires, from the burning plane and the Caribbean, to the streets of Los Angeles, Chicago, Miami and New York. In such configuration the United States stands as a necessary point of reference, a literary trope, where people not only speak but also write en español.

The course will be conducted entirely in Spanish. Pre-requisite: SPAN 155.

Required Texts

Other materials will be posted on Blackboard http://blackboard.moravian.edu/ or distributed in class. Please set up and account and enroll yourself in this course immediately after our first meeting. In Blackboard look for LATIN AMERICAN CONTEMPORARY CULTURE (SPAN248.FA08)

Goals

-Foster your interest in the literature and culture of Latin America and provide an awareness of its diversity. Such diversity is also represented by the short stories written by Latino and Chicano writers in the United States.
-Identify areas of interest for future courses and/or undergraduate research (honors, independent studies and SOAR projects)
-Read, understand, and analyze short stories and theoretical essays in Spanish
-Write critically, concisely, and clearly in Spanish
-Work on the development of a thesis statement and supportive evidence
-Familiarize yourself with the most important databases in the field of Spanish literature: Modern Language Association International Bibliography (MLA), HAPI (Hispanic Periodical Index), and HLAS (Handbook of Latin American Studies).
-Familiarize yourself with the MLA Handbook and the MLA Style Manual.
-Communicate with sophistication and ease in spoken Spanish about the class topics through formal presentations and class discussion

*If you are a student requiring learning assistance, I will be happy to accommodate you. I recommend you contact Mr. Joe Kempher in the Office of Learning Services (Ext. 1510) or Dr. Ronald Kline in the Counseling Center. Also, feel free to talk to me directly.

Requirements and Evaluation

1. Attendance. You need to come to class and be on time. 0-2 absences will not be penalized, but may affect class performance. More than two absences will result in a lowering of the final grade by one point for every additional absence. Please turn off your cell phone before entering the class.

2. Exams. There will one final exam. The format may be in-class or take-home. Please note that make-up exams will be granted only in extraordinary circumstances.
3. Oral presentation. Each of you will have the opportunity to lead a portion of one class. Details will be posted on Blackboard and discussed in class.

4. Papers. Students will write two short papers (3 pages) and final paper (5-6 pages). We will focus not only in the mechanics of writing but also, on the development of a thesis statement and supportive evidence. All papers should follow the MLA guidelines and must include a list of works cited. I will not accept papers via e-mail unless we have made previous arrangements. No late papers will be accepted.

5. Homework. Homework will include a variety of readings and exercises such as short response journals, question writing, and thesis development activities. I will collect homework usually before or on the day of an exam. Although you won't receive a specific grade for your homework (only pass or fail) your participation grade will be affected if you fail to submit it or if the work is insufficient. In other words, you don't receive extra credit for doing homework, but failure to do it will impact your grade adversely.

6. Participation. Students are expected to arrive prepared to actively participate in all class activities by having read and understood the readings and completed all assignments. Please note that outside of class, the Department of Foreign Languages requires that starting with Spanish 150 you attend at least three events organized by the Spanish Club. Participation in these events will count toward the overall class participation grade. The complete guidelines for participation are posted on Blackboard.

Academic Honesty

It is your responsibility to make sure you are familiar with the Policy on Academic Honesty. Plagiarism and cheating are serious offenses and will not be tolerated.
