Course Description
Welcome to History 113: The United States to 1877. This course provides an introduction to the political, economic, ideological, and social developments in the United States from contact to 1877. The first part of the course traces the developments that allowed colonists from thirteen disparate colonies to see themselves as one people who should constitute one nation. The second half explores how Americans struggled with the meaning and consequences of their Revolution. They debated the contradiction between the ideals of liberty and equality and the existence of slavery and other forms of dependence. Within a hundred years of the Revolution, these issues had so polarized the North and South that the election of a Republican president, Abraham Lincoln, in 1860 prompted the secession of eleven slaveholding states. Only four years of bloody civil war restored the Union and destroyed slavery. This course will provide students with an opportunity to examine and discuss the significance of the American Revolution, Market Revolution, Jacksonian Democracy, and other important issues in American history as they explore the roots of sectionalism and Civil War. We will pay close attention to the interactions between Native Americans, Africans, and Europeans.

Course Objectives
Students will
- Become familiar with the main themes in American history from contact to 1877.
- Consider human agency, causality, and contingency in historical change.
- Identify the roles and contributions of Native Americans, Africans, and Europeans to the development of the United States.
- Learn to critically evaluate and interpret a variety of primary sources, including documents, archeological data, pictures, folk stories/music, and oral tradition.
- Learn to think historically and make arguments about the causes of change in history.
- Approach writing as a process, one that involves considerable ongoing reflection and revision.
- Use writing conventions appropriate to the discipline of history.
- Give and receive constructive criticism.
- Hone oral and written communications skills.

Required Texts

Additional readings will be distributed in class or emailed to you.

Assignments
During the course, you will write two 4-5 page papers using as a variety of primary sources. For the first paper you will utilize documentary sources and archaeological data to assess whether continuity or changed characterized Mohawk Iroquois society in the decades immediately following contact with Europeans. As preparation, you will work collaboratively with other students in workshops to answer questions that will help you write the larger essay. Group work will be handed in at the end of the period or at the beginning of the next class. For the second paper you will be asked to write historical fiction. You will assume the identity of a nineteenth-century slave who has escaped from their master. Although fictional, what you write must be based on your reading and interpretation of at least thirty runaway slave ads that appeared regularly in antebellum southern newspapers. As with the first essay, a series of workshops will prepare you to write this paper.

Tests and Quizzes
There will be two major tests. The first, a mid-term exam will be held during a regularly scheduled class period. The final exam will be held during the exam period. As the exam schedule has been set, travel and other non-medical emergencies will not be accepted as a reason for missing or rescheduling the exam. In addition, you will write seven unannounced quizzes spaced throughout the semester.

Academic Dishonesty
According to the Moravian College Student Handbook, the following constitutes plagiarism: “the use, deliberate or not, of any outside source without proper acknowledgment. While the work of others often constitutes a necessary resource for academic research, such work must be properly used and credited to the original author. This principle applies to professional scholars as well as to students….All work that students submit or present as part of course assignments or requirements must be their own original work….When students use the specific thoughts, ideas, writings, or expressions of others, they must accompany each instance of use with some form of attribution to the source. Direct quotes from any source (including the Internet) must be placed in quotation marks…and be accompanied by an appropriate citation.” Plagiarism will result in the offender receiving zero in the course.
